Dear Sir:

Which shall it be, dulege, Staution on the President or the liberals? I see it as a politically motivated smear tactics to get the President from the very beginning. How many realize what will be in store for this nation if the liberals, communists and communist sympathizers take over?

President Nixon's honorable services to our country far out-weigh any known or unknown mistakes. He has sought to maintain our freedom and to bring peace to the world. I urge you to use your influence to help stop the persecution of our President by writing as many Congressmen and Senators as you can at this crucial time.

Sincerely,
Myrtle Reynolds

The Sunday School Lesson

HERBERT C. BRADSHAW

DURHAM, N. C. 27702
COMMENT ON THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY School lesson for Sunday, February 10, 1974.
Topic: Victorious in Defeat.
Scripture: John 18:12-19:15.
"For this I was born, and for this I have come into the world, to bear witness to the truth." John 18:37.

The contrast between worldly and spiritual concerns is nowhere more evident that in the context of the words of Jesus quoted above. In the hearing given Jesus by Pilate, the Roman governor of Judea, Pilate asked Him if He were king of the Jews. In the dialogue this query introduced, Jesus explained that His kingship is not of this world. Pilate pursued his query, and Jesus replied, "You say that I am a king. For this I was born, and for this I have come into the world, to bear witness to the truth."

Pontius Pilate, who as procurator was the Roman emperor's administrator in Judea, was naturally concerned with power and authority, with getting ahead in the world and attaining high position and success. He already had influence in Rome, capital of the empire, where he was a favorite of Sejanus, commander of the praetorian guard, the emperor's personal bodyguard. Through this friendship, Pilate was appointed procurator of Judea by the Emperor Tiberius and held the post for over a decade.

The idea that Jesus might be a king clearly intrigued Pilate. But Jesus, while claiming an unworldly kingship, turned the question on the governor. You are interested in kingships and earthly power, He in effect told Pilate, but the purpose of my coming into the world is to bear witness to the truth. To the practical, power-minded governor, Jesus' reply was incomprehensible, so all he could say was to ask, "What is truth?" And, as Sir Francis Bacon put it in his essay, "Of Truth," he did not wait for an answer.

In Hebrew thought the word truth carried the connotation of stability, security, faithfulness. The writer of the Gospel of John used the term in its Greek connotation of being the manifestation of reality with specific theological reference to God's revelation of Himself. As John understood the answer of Jesus to Pilate, and so recorded it, Jesus came to bear witness to the truth that God was revealing Himself in Jesus Christ and was providing the way of deliverance from sin into what Paul liked to regard as the freedom of sonship.

The Hebrew concept of truth is not lacking here, either. In bearing witness to the truth, Jesus revealed the faithfulness of God in not abandoning man, His creation, and in making a way of reconciliation for the creature who has become alienated from his Creator. In Jesus Christ God kept His promise to Israel and, through Israel, to the world.

Jesus demonstrated His faithfulness in adhering to the purpose of His mission. As the world saw Him seized by a group of soldiers, and Temple police; accused and rebuked by the high priest; questioned scourged, and condemned by the governor; mocked and derided by Roman soldiers; executed in the most degrading of executions, Jesus appeared defeated and discredited, a Prophet whose mission had failed, a Teacher whose teaching had come to naught.

Jesus could have avoided such a situation, but to have done so would have really frustrated His mission and would have made His coming into the world in effectual. People would no doubt have applauded Him if He had escaped, at least they would have praised His "sense." Had Jesus done that, the world would have lost its Savior.

"The world through wisdom does not know God," Paul wrote, "and it does not comprehend or understand the mind and purpose of God. Jesus did not waver in carrying out His mission. In doing so, He achieved true victory, through staunch dedication to His purpose, in completing His mission. True victory may not be what the world calls victory. True victory is attained by holding true to one's self, to one's high purpose in life, to one's God and His will.

CHILDREN LEARN WHAT THEY LIVE

If a child lives with criticism learns to condemn.
If a child lives with hostility learns to fight.
If a child lives with fear learns to be apprehensive.
If a child lives with pity learns to feel sorry for himself.
If a child lives with ridicule learns to be shy.
If a child lives with jealousy learns to feel guilty.
If a child lives with tolerance
he learns to be patient.
If a child lives with encouragement
he learns confidence.
If a child lives with praise learns to be appreciative.
If a child lives with approval learns to like himself.
If a child lives with recognition
he learns to have a goal.
If a child lives with honesty learns what truth is.
If a child lives with fairness learns justice.
If a child lives with security
he learns to have faith in himself and those about him.
If a child lives with friendship he learns that the world is a nice place in which to live.
With what is your child living?
